Chimbote- The smell about knocked me over. Someone said "When it stinks around here, that means there's money in town." This Port City established itself as a world class fish exporter in 1960 . The fish fillets are packed, iced and shipped and all the "remains" are ground up and oven baked. The smoke stacks stand 30 foot tall with no filters to soften the blow. The stench reeks of rotten fish, blood and guts. The aroma of fish innards and left over parts from heads to tails wafting over the city is an experience not soon to be forgotten. So what's the big stink about? Phosphorus... to make soap, fertilizer and matches.

In a way we have brought our own shipment of spiritual phosphorus to town. Like soap it will help clean up, like fertilizer it will help for things to grow up, and like a match it will help light a spiritual fire in the hearts of all who sit under the anointed teachings. Thanks to our partners we have set up another Video Bible School lending library for the 150 churches of this town of 300,000 inhabitants. The pastors that we meet with were very excited about the material and thanked me for choosing their town to bring the training materials.

Pastor Fernando Tinoco of The Central Baptist Church said that only 30% of the pastors have Bible training. Pastor Daniel Arguedas from Christian Community Church of Christ will be assisting in the circulation of the materials. Both of these Pastors posses a fire to see God ignite the spiritual climate of their city with a deeper faith based on a firm foundation.

As I was returning to Lima I passed through a small town that made me sick to see the miserable, destructive nature of sin. I saw a man passed out drunk on the sidewalk, young men gambling in the street, a woman in filth and rags drinking alcohol from a glass jar. It jolted me to gaze upon this horrible sight. God spoke to me, encouraging me to keep on setting up the video Bible Schools. The need is so great - to reach as many as we can. Just like Chimbote, Hell is hot and it stinks.
