Teaching the kids to sing in English..

They cook meals on an open fire and live without furnishings, huddled together in tiny one or two room unfinished dwellings open to the elements. Many of our families live a life with very little. We teach our children to honor their parents and we celebrate them. Last month we honored their moms with a special celebration, reading a poem, then singing a song that describes love and respect for the one who carried them in the womb through weariness and pain, who fought tooth and nail to provide and protect. They sang, "To you I dedicate my verses, my being, my victories, to you I give my respect Señora, Señora". Upon the completion of the song, a wave of children flowed out from behind the choir carrying the hand crafted tulips they had made, giving them to their moms with hugs & kisses. On the walls hung hand painted posters with prose from the children's hearts.

The evening was charged with a festive atmosphere and the moms beamed from ear to ear. We played games. We honored the twelve mothers who volunteer week in and week out at the community center. They cook and clean and work alongside us and assist the children. We rewarded their faithfulness with a certificate of appreciation along with a coffee mug full of fresh chocolates. After games and refreshments we gave out bags marked with the children's names filled with carefully chosen clothing for each child, and a "dispensa" of rice and beans for their families. We then gathered for prayer and the moms and their children left feeling loved. Thank you for sustaining this missionary outreach to the poor through your prayers & gifts.
