Haitians receiving relief

Over the years I have seen God touch many hearts while I was traveling on air planes. I remember being on a return flight from Cuba witnessing to a couple who were Cuban night club entertainers. I shared the Gospel with them and they both prayed with me out loud to receive Jesus Christ in their hearts. Just a couple of years ago I was traveling to a mission's conference in Washington State and I shared the savior with a young man who was a professional snow boarder and marijuana grower. He was so impressed with Jesus' death on the cross for his sins that he vowed to get a big fat Jesus tattoo on his right arm the first chance he got. Recently, I was headed to Baltimore to minister in my home state. I got to my seat assignment on the small commuter jet to see my companion for this flight. He had dreadlocks down to his waist. Compassion for his soul welled up inside of me.

I introduced myself and engaged in conversation with him. He was well educated and very articulate. He has an engineering degree and works in Silicon Valley as a Software Information Pipeline Engineer working for major corporations channeling and manipulating their data to conform to the narrative that they want. This manipulation really bothers him and others who work with data and are in the know about the misinformation that they publish for their clients. He has a peer group of other engineers who are agnostics like himself. They have an ongoing discussion of where are we headed as a nation when there is so much cover-up and misinformation. These young men are not conservatives nor progressives but intellectuals who are concerned about our future as a nation.

Need I say that he opened a big door for the Gospel? I began in Genesis and ended in Revelation. He was fascinated with a Biblical World view of current events. I shared with him the tools that he would need to dig up Biblical foundational truth for himself. I told him to start with intellectual arguments for the belief in Jesus Christ written by agnostics who converted to Christianity. I told him that if he desired to take the raw data of scripture and properly interpret it he would need to accept Christ as his savior so the Holy Spirit could guide him and that it would be important to understand the basics of Hermeneutics to rightly divide God's word. He was so pumped as he took notes on his phone; looking forward to beginning his studies on his 'quest for God'! He told me he has a friend, a former agnostic in his intellectual group who studied and searched world religions that now confesses Jesus Christ as his savior.

My wife insisted several times as we packed that I use a particular suitcase and check it in. I normally take carry-on luggage. What are the chances we would arrive in baggage claim and see that we both had the same color & make of luggage? To him, it was a supernatural sign of DIVINE intervention! He wanted to have a picture taken with me & our suitcases. He told me he is feeling passionate to pursue God intellectually & experientially. Please pray for his pursuit of the way, the truth & the life!
