Hurricane Keith ripped through the Central American country of Belize on September 30, 2000. The storm, which reached a category 4 struck hardest on Belize's Caribbean coast. The Island of Ambergris Caye received the unbridled fury of Keith's wrath. Homes were flooded and roofs were ripped off under the 120 kph winds and 56 cms of rainfall. It was almost a year ago when this horrific storm hit, but even today you can see the lingering destruction and impoverished people trying to rebuild their homes. More important than the physical upheaval is the spiritual devastation of lives marred by sin. Jesus is still the answer to rebuild lives and restore families. I would like to share with you a story of a Afro-Caribbean man who gave his heart to the Lord one evening while I was ministering on the Island. For this story, I am going to call him Joe.

Joe lived with a lady for seven years and had two children. They broke up and he meet someone else and got married. Meanwhile, his former girl friend went from man to man, dragging along his two children. Several other children were added on to her entourage and all were raised living a vagabond lifestyle. Joe's marriage failed and he reunited with the mother of his children. One day she meet Jesus Christ, fell in love and gave her heart to him. Joe and his girl friend got married, and at that meeting I spoke of before, Joe committed his life to Christ also.

Isn't the Lord good to heal the broken hearted and to turn the hearts of the fathers to their children? I want to thank You, our supporters and prayer partners for sending me to minister to the country of Belize.
