Ceutoa, North Africa - Across from the straights of Gibraltar and next to Morocco is a Spanish speaking colony of Spain. Of the Seventy five thousand inhabitants, the majority are Muslim. It was the first time that I was immersed in a predominantly Arab culture. The food was really good if you are into spices and seasonings. The people were a little stand offish, but warmed up quickly.

I slept in the basement of a furniture store and the rats upstairs kept me awake as they rearranged the furniture. It is one of the few Christian outposts in Ceuta. The store is operated by an international Spanish ministry called Remar. They are practically self financed through small businesses that they start in order to provide funding for all kinds of ministry. The members of this ministry live in community. They work among addicts, street people and abandoned children. They are the largest evangelical denomination in Spain and are working in 46 different countries. I ministered to the three recovering addicts that ran the store. It meant a lot to them because they felt rather isolated and spiritually hungry.

I want to share with you how Jesus Christ changed the life of one of these young men: "Hello, my name is Jose and I am one of the many youth that fell into the world of drugs. I got hooked on heroine at age 16 and was an addict for 13 years. I lost everything, my Mom and Dad, my wife and children. The worse thing of all to loose was my personality. I was living on the street, and I became like the walking dead. I was suicidal. I got up one day and spoke to someone about Remar. I thought I would enter the program for 15 days and get some food."

They spoke of a God who forgives sin, this God wanted to know me. Now I thank God because he rescued me from the life I was living. Now I know Him as my God and Savior. I give him glory and honor."

We must continue to help get materials into the hands of people like Jose so that they can mature in their walks. We are re-shooting courses and formatting on DVD. We need $1,000. per course and funds for copies.
