The mothers in our community were bubbling with joyful anticipation as they prepared for the two day medical clinic to be held at the LSMI ministry base in Mezcales. They rolled up their sleeves and scrubbed down our facility, tables, and chairs, saying “the doctors are coming and we must clean up.” Then the big moment arrived. CompassioNet Impact rolled in with a busload of medical personnel from Denver, Colorado. The bus was full of doctors, nurses, a physician assistant, paramedics, a premed student, support staff and children’s ministry teams.

The team hit the ground and went into action. They dismantled Carol’s clothesline and divided the downstairs into a make shift clinic, hanging sheets for private screening areas. They were working in all directions, organizing medications, strapping on stethoscopes, pulling out blood pressure cuffs, and laying out prescription eye glasses. Carol briefed the team and let them know that we would be heading out later that day to the airport on our way to the United States, for a little health issue of our own. When I came down to greet them, one of the physicians took me aside to pray for my heart. I have a strong heart, but I have some blockage issues that I believe will be addressed before this newsletter gets to you.

It was wonderful to see the medical team serving the poor and needy, both through medicine and prayer. They cared for basic needs, treating sugar diabetes, high blood pressure, parasites, wound care, and intestinal issues. The clinic provided care for approximately 80 the first day and around 100 the second day.

The medical team also tested eyes and gave out eye glasses

As the last day came to an end, a mother came walking up. She had returned to give the doctors tamarind from her home, while another mother came back carrying watermelon. Someone else brought fresh mangos, as they expressed their love and gratitude to the team.

Thank God for this ministry through Medicine. We also thank God for the LSMI ministry base which is under construction. Your financial support toward the building of the base is making it possible to facilitate outreaches such as this.
