Never underestimate the Godly impact that an imperfect grandparent has on influencing her loved ones and grandchildren; helping them to fulfill their God-given destiny. Isn't it amazing how God is in the restoration business? He can do wonders in broken homes and shattered lives. When I began the work in CardboardLandia there was a woman named Vicki who I invited to attend our new mission. She had a heart for God and she would ask me many pointed questions concerning spiritual and practical matters. I would give her direct counsel from the Word of God; I did not sugar-coat the truth. I was not concerned if she would stay or leave. I would tell her simply what the Bible said concerning her questions about such things as unmarried couples cohabitating together, etc. and so on. I have been astonished at her hunger for God as she has been trying to straighten out her own life along with her entanglements and dysfunctional family situations.

Today we stand amazed to see how God is working. Take for example her two daughters who are still not too interested in spiritual matters but do attend on special occasions. Nacho, her oldest daughter's ex-husband recently accepted the Lord and is a committed church attendee. His face beams with the joy of Jesus. Vicki faithfully brings Emilio and Sophia, her 2 grandchildren which are also Nacho's children to church and to our community center throughout the week. The children, like their grandmother are growing in their faith and participating in their church. I was recently ministering at the CardboardLandia mission and I started my message by asking "What is the Most Important Question you can ask God? Vicki shot off her heart felt, passionate response, "God what do you want from me?" It blew me away to so quickly hear the answer I had already penned in my message. You see, our life is not our own, we were bought with a price, we serve a risen Lord and we should ask Him what He desires for us to do. I am grateful to the Holy Spirit who is faithful to continue to lead and guide those who seek to please their Creator.

Thank you for helping to make this possible. We love and Bless you!
