The woman came from behind the lunch meat counter, her eyes sparkling. She pulled down the face mask and asked, "Do you remember me?". She was wearing a butcher's outfit from head to toe and frankly I was clueless. "You came to my door, my husband..." "Oh! forgive me, of course I remember you. Your name is Lupita, right? Yes, she responded. "I have been praying to God in Jesus name just as you told me to do; reading my Bible. My life has completely changed. I have hope and peace, and my son no longer wants revenge. Carol put the turkey ham into the shopping cart and came strolling toward us. I said to her, "Honey do you remember when I went to San José door to door inviting people to church? Lupita is the lady I told you about whose husband was brutally murdered."

It was a divine appointment. Less than two weeks after her husband was stabbed to death in his Taxi, we were knocking on her door. She was still in shock and her life was shattered. Her 21 year old son who idolized his father was full of rage and wanted to take justice into his own hands. I counseled and cried with her. Standing in her doorway we prayed together. With her children by her side, we asked God to heal their broken hearts, & take away all bitterness. They prayed to forgive their enemies and that justice would be served. Most importantly, they invited the Prince of Peace into their lives. She was beaming, telling us of her plans for the future. I marveled at her resilient spirit and rejoiced to see her laying hold of a hopeful future. The Holy Spirit turned tragedy into triumphant! Jesus is still the same yesterday, today and forever.

We continue to work on the expansion of the children's ministry area. The day we poured the columns was a good day, but our favorite part came after the cement truck left. Left over concrete was poured on the ground in front of the building. Miguel and I took shovels and began filling a wheelbarrow. We went to the neighbors to put it on the dirt in and outside their cardboard dwelling. Several loads later, one room of their two rooms had concrete. This will help when the rains come, to give them relief from the mud.

Thankyou for making it possible for us to be here, to touch lives in Jesus' name. We can't do it without you.

Together We are Life Savers,

Ju & Carol
