If you want to catch fish, you go to where the fish are. If you want to lead people to Christ, you go where the people are. We went to the open air market, which was bustling with activity, to share the Gospel and to haggle with the vendors. The Gospel has always felt at home in the market place, meeting people where they live. The merchants had their goods sprawled out on blankets surrounding the plaza and under the covered walkways of the Spanish colonial buildings. There were llama wool knitted socks, hats, sweaters & coats, hand crafts such as pan pipes, jewelry & pottery. We would engage a vendor in conversation, asking prices, cracking jokes and sharing with them the good news of Jesus Christ.

Several vendors prayed with us publicly, asking forgiveness for their sins & inviting Jesus Christ into their hearts. One lady named Patricia was selling little hand painted water colors that her daughter had made. As we talked about prices, I began to share my testimony & her need for a savior. It was not easy at first, she did not seem to grasp the concepts, but she asked questions and we did our best to supply answers. We prayed and the Lord touched her in a beautiful way. She said, "I feel the presence of God all over me, I feel an electrical charge in my chest."

Thirteen year old girl, her aunt and a llama named Jose with Lee

Vilma, Lee, Jesus & Karen (child)

We were traveling the mountains overlooking Cusco when we stopped to see a small herd of llamas. A young lady named Vilma approached us out in the middle of nowhere selling necklaces. I spoke to her about her need to ask Christ to come into her life. She received Christ with great joy & said, "I want my husband to meet you, he is an alcoholic & needs help." I told her where I would be preaching that night in the city.

Though it was many miles away and took them the better part of 2 hours to get there, they came. After the service, I took this young couple back to the pastor's study. The 25 year old man, shaking from the effects of alcoholism, humbly received Christ, and the pastor of the church invited them to receive ongoing care at the church. Vilma and her children suffer greatly from her husband's addiction. Please pray that He will overcome this addiction and become the spiritual head and provider for this family.

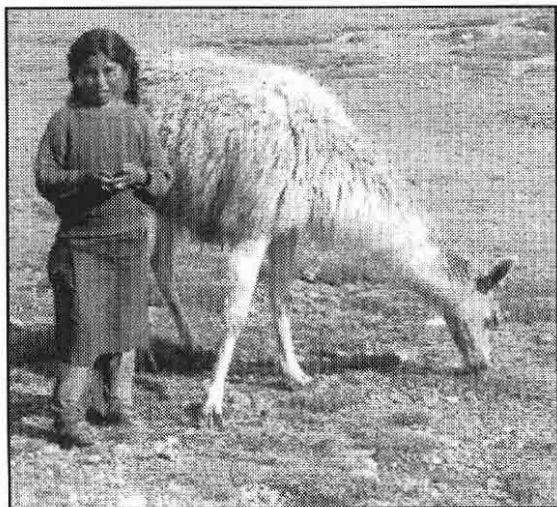

Together we touch the World!
