There is an energy you feel the moment you enter “Card-board-landia”. The place is teeming with activity. The dirt and dust, the hustle of life; of people living on the edge, makes you feel like you just stepped into a “Mad Max” movie.

I pulled up to check on Emiliano’s family on my way to minister at Tierra Santa church. Just as I stopped, a cloud of dust swirled up as a military convoy of two heavily armed vehicles with 50 caliber machine guns and a dozen masked soldiers with assault weapons thundered by. I invited the family to church and went on my way, when suddenly an armed crew of soldiers popped up in front of me, and the other came barreling up behind me. I turned the corner to the make-shift church with it’s tarps flapping in the wind, the Mexican marines in pursuit. I stepped out of my vehicle with my Bibles in hand. They confronted me asking who I was, where did I live and what was I doing there? Just as I was opening my Bible to show them the pages, a man came running out of his shack, barefoot in shorts, his bare belly bouncing as he ran. He shouted, “Pastor, Pastor!”. He was afraid they were going to haul me away, as they had done to others before. I explained I was a minister, and another soldier commented that I must be a priest. They told me I could go, and I invited them to come hear me preach. They went on their way.

The following Sunday, we picked up Emiliano, Eliu, & his mom Lupita and went to minister at Tierra Santa. After the message, the church had a drawing for a food package. Lupita could not believe it when she won the drawing, and as she went to accept it she began to weep and thank God for his goodness. We appreciate your prayers and your continued support that makes it possible to minister to these families and make a difference.
