Does a church have to be a big church to be missions minded? I mean, does a church in the U.S. or on foreign soil need to have tremendous financial and human resources to make disciples, raise up leadership, and plant new churches?

I want to tell you about a church by the name of the Iglesia Christiana Biblica (Bible Christian Church) in Santa Cruz, Bolivia. They are a church of 150 members. The pastor has been bi-vocational up until recently when he left his accounting career. Pastor Victor Palmera is being used by God not only as a local pastor who founded this church but also as the founder of a network of 14 sister churches called by the same name. Pastor Victor has a passion to fulfill the Great Commission to "Go and make disciples". This is an ongoing work starting at home in the Bible School which currently has about 24 students. One of the courses that the students are taking is our video course on Spiritual Authority.

A taxi driver by the name of Leo prayed to accept Christ

This church does not depend on foreign funding to build their building, but instead casts a vision & practices the principles of tithing and giving generously to God's work. Isn't it amazing what God can do when His people are obedient to His word? God has allowed us to help this wonderful move of the Spirit by supplying them with our complete Bible School on video. We also encourage them to copy and distribute the materials. I want to thank missionary Paul Butler for his cooperation in helping us to minister and network with this mission minded movement.

And, I want to thank you for making it possible
